

The benefits of hiring a neurodiverse individual for a few hours a week, part-time or full-time, allows for a culture that fosters innovation and drives human progress while empowering skilled individuals who seek employment. Employment for neurodiverse individuals improves quality of life and provides employers a largely untapped hiring pool.

BENEFITS OF HIRING INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES

- Fill critical hiring needs within the organization
- Improved employee retention - 95% retention rates reported by TPI and others
- DEI/Human Capital reporting and ESG reports
- Leadership opportunities in employee development and mentoring
- Positively impact the societal costs associated with supporting someone with a disability long-term by offering opportunities for earned income and greater independence
- With appropriate supports, employers find that they have found employees who outperform their neurotypical peers - Scott et al (2017)
